

PROFILE

Originally self-taught and later a boot-camp graduate, I am a freelance developer particularly interested in the frontend with experience building, testing, and deploying full websites as well as providing ongoing site maintenance. I enjoy sharpening my code skills by building apps, exploring articles, and participating in online developer communities. I look forward to entering the tech field full time and coding alongside a team of other talented developers with the similar goals of building amazing things together while working towards accessible tech for all.
